

Knights,

In the last couple of weeks we have been tested in ways that are uncommon and still evolving. So far we've been up to the challenge, and I don't expect that to change as the challenges continue over the days to come. This is where I need your help.

Around the installation, as social distancing begins to take its toll and present its own challenges, the urge to meet up with others is getting stronger. Social interaction is human nature, but if we're going to beat COVID-19, we have to do it together. This is the definition of one team, one fight, done from six feet apart.

I would ask that everyone on the installation respect the request to keep socially isolated as much as is possible, where we can control it. We can beat this thing, but we need to do it together.

So for Pete's Sake, remember to keep that six foot separation, don't group up in public areas, and only venture out for absolute necessities. This is a fight we will win, as long as we fight it together.

I've never been prouder to serve alongside you.
